Artist Statement

Tea has been a great fascination to me for many years, from the leaves to the tea sets. It became an even bigger part of my habits when taking a course in Kennesaw State University called Tea Cultures in Asia. It taught me more about the ideas of Teaism, Wabi Sabi, and the art of tea. Tea is not just a hot drink of leaves, but is an integral staple in many countries around the world, particularly in Asia. In various Asian cultures, the practice of drinking tea helps to harmonize humanity and nature, strengthen the mind and attain enlightenment. Drinking tea is not simply adding hot water to leaves; the whole process of boiling the water, choosing the tea set, brewing the tea and then appreciating the aroma, temperature and taste of the drink, is a moment of bliss and tranquility. Compared to other drinks, tea is a great representative of taking one's time and living in the moment. The world at present is incredibly fast paced, dynamic and loud to the point it can become overstimulating. It is important in those occasions to find one's center, take a moment of reprieve which will allow the mind to clear and make better decisions. In addition, tea helps one to keep in mind that nothing is permanent or perfect, for it is just nature for things to ebb and flow.

Té ha si una gran fascinación para mí por muchos años, de las hojas hasta los sets de té. Se volvió un hábito más grande cuando tome un curso en Kennesaw State University llamada Culturas de Té en Asia. Me enseñó más sobre las ideas de Teaism, Wabi Sabi, y el arte de té. Té no es simplemente una bebida caliente de hojas, sino una costumbre integral en muchos países, particularmente en Asia. En varias culturas asiáticas, la práctica de tomar té ayuda para armonizar la humanidad y naturaleza, fortaleciendo la mente y adquiriendo sabiduría. Tomando té no es simplemente agregando agua caliente a hojas, todo el proceso de calentando el agua, escogiendo el set de té, es un momento de felicidad y tranquilidad. Comparados con otras bebidas, té es una gran representación de tomarse su tiempo y viviendo en el momento. El mundo de ahora en el presente es increíblemente rápido, dinámico, y ruidoso al punto de convertirse sobre estimulante. Es importante en esas ocasiones que uno encuentre su centro, tomar un momento de respiración en que se deje aclarar la mente y se hagan mejores decisiones. Además de eso, té ayuda a tener en mente que nada es permanente o perfecto porque todo es completamente natural que cosas vengan y se vayan.
