Portraying the Immigrant Experience

My drawing represents the side of the border between Mexico and the United States, but despite being in another country with a different language, the person adapts to the type of life he leads. But, life in the United States is not easy; Many come people with the same idea, but with the passage of time they realize that this is not the case. The life of an immigrant is not easy at all since they have to go to work with the fear of whether or not they will be reported.
